

Kautilya Society
RMLNLU

presents

BLOG WRITING COMPETITION

2024

ABOUT KAUTILYA SOCIETY

Kautilya Society, a dynamic subdivision of the "Vidhi" framework, serves as a progressive policy and law society within the college, drawing inspiration from the ancient Indian economist and philosopher. The society's primary goal is to foster a comprehensive understanding of contemporary policy issues, engaging students in critical analysis and innovative problem-solving. Its comprehensive approach involves various platforms, including insightful blogs, engaging podcasts that facilitate a deeper understanding of complex legal concepts, and independent projects that promote academic inquiry and creativity.

Moreover, the society collaborates with reputable law firms and policy think tanks to conduct in-depth research projects, allowing students to contribute to real-world policy development and analysis. Its "Book Adda" and "Policy Adda" initiatives serve as a rich repository of legal and policy literature, promoting continuous learning and intellectual growth. By nurturing socially responsible legal and policy scholars through research, collaboration, and interdisciplinary engagement, Kautilya Society is dedicated to nurturing future leaders committed to upholding justice, equity, and effective governance.

ABOUT THE COMPETITION

The blog writing competition conducted by the Kautilya society would allow the participants to ponder upon the broader policy themes with contemporary relevance. Such themes along with its sub themes are directed by the society to get a concrete viewpoint on that issue. The competition would not only delve into the legal issues of these themes but the overarching applicability of the proposed legal positions in the realm of policy making.

THEMES IN BRIEF

REVITALIZING MULTILATERALISM

Multilateralism, a diplomatic approach involving three or more states, emphasizes inclusivity, reciprocity, and consensus-building. By fostering cooperation through specific principles and structured arrangements, it addresses global challenges, establishes international norms, and enhances collaboration. This approach strengthens international relations and promotes a stable, equitable world order by engaging diverse nations in collective action.

Sub Topics may include:

1. Multilateralism as a Mode of Conflict Resolution in a Polarized World:

Multilateralism fosters dialogue and collaboration, offering inclusive solutions to global conflicts like the Israel-Palestine and Russia-Ukraine crises. It prevents unilateral actions, but geopolitical rivalries and diminishing trust in global institutions challenge its efficacy.

2. Future of Global Trade: Amidst the Trade War:

Trade wars, such as the U.S.-China dispute, disrupt global supply chains and create uncertainty in markets. While protectionism challenges free trade, it also drives regional partnerships and demands modernization of trade institutions for stability and equity.

3. Multi-Alignment as the Groundwork of Multilateralism:

Multi-alignment allows nations to engage with diverse stakeholders, promoting flexibility and inclusivity. By balancing alliances, it strengthens multilateralism, as seen in India's strategic engagements, but requires careful navigation of conflicting interests.

IMMIGRATION: BORDERS, BELONGING, AND BEYOND

Immigration has become a major discussion point in developed economies, with bipartisan support for a unified policy solution remaining elusive and public opinion highly polarized. Innovative approaches, such as digital platforms for matching skills with labour market needs and transparent border systems like those in the UAE and Israel, can streamline migration processes and ensure fairness. Collaborative frameworks, including agreements for climate-driven migration and flexible work programs, can address both the challenges and opportunities of immigration, fostering equitable growth and stronger international cooperation.

Sub Topics may include:

1. Balancing national sovereignty and humanitarian obligation.

Balancing national sovereignty with humanitarian obligations involves safeguarding borders while ensuring the humane treatment of migrants, aligning national interests with international human rights standards.

2. Immigration and Economy

Immigration serves as a catalyst for economic growth by addressing labour shortages, enhancing innovation, and enriching the workforce with diversity. Skilled migrants boost productivity and competitiveness, while a consistent influx of workers supports key industries and mitigates the challenges posed by aging populations.

3. Global south perspective on migration

From the perspective of the Global South, migration is primarily driven by economic disparities, armed conflicts, and climate-related challenges. Migrants often encounter significant barriers, including restrictive policies and social exclusion, yet they make substantial contributions to the economies of their destination countries.

4. Immigration and social integration

Social integration allows immigrants to access essential services and participate in society while keeping their cultural identity. It requires both adaptation by immigrants and acceptance by the host society. Effective policies promote inclusivity and social cohesion, benefiting everyone.

INTERNATIONAL ENVIRONMENTAL LAW

International environmental law (IEL) is a critical field that addresses the global challenges of environmental degradation and resource depletion through cooperative legal frameworks among nations. This branch of public international law aims to regulate activities that impact the environment, ensuring sustainable development while balancing the needs of both current and future generations.

Sub Topics may include:

1. Role of diplomacy in tackling the climate change conundrum

Climate diplomacy refers to the strategic use of diplomatic channels and tools to address global climate change and its multifaceted impacts on international relations. This approach encompasses negotiations for treaties, policies, and cooperative frameworks aimed at reducing greenhouse gas emissions and adapting to climate impacts.

2. Climate finance and technology transfer

At present, there exists a huge vacuum between the developed and developing nations in terms of infrastructure, technology and finance in tackling climate change. Under this sub-theme, various ways and methods can be explored to bridge this gap and ensure that poorer nations do not suffer at the expense of richer nations.

3. Energy transition and resource nationalization

As nations strive to meet climate goals and reduce greenhouse gas emissions, the energy transition becomes imperative. However, this transition is frequently complicated by resource nationalism, particularly in countries rich in fossil fuel reserves. Governments may adopt protectionist policies to maximize domestic benefits from their natural resources, which can hinder international investments and collaborations necessary for a successful transition to renewable energy. Under this sub-theme, explore how resource nationalism affects the pace and scale of renewable energy projects, particularly in countries rich in fossil fuels but slow to transition to greener alternatives.

4. Climate finance and technology transfer

At present, there exists a huge vacuum between the developed and developing nations in terms of infrastructure, technology and finance in tackling climate change. Under this sub-theme, various ways and methods can be explored to bridge this gap and ensure that poorer nations do not suffer at the expense of richer nations.

5. Corporate accountability

Analyze the role of corporations in contributing to environmental degradation and climate change. This sub-theme can discuss emerging trends in holding corporations accountable through international law, including liability for environmental harm and corporate social responsibility initiatives that promote sustainable practices

GLOBAL PUBLIC DEBT AND SOCIAL EQUITY

Global public debt has surged in recent years, raising critical concerns about its impact on social equity. As governments struggle with rising debt burdens, the question arises: How can fiscal policies balance the need for debt management with the goal of achieving social fairness and equitable development?

Sub Topics may include:

1. Impact of Public Debt on Social Services

Rising levels of public debt directly influence the allocation of resources for essential services such as healthcare, education, and food security. This raises questions about the adequacy of policies, their accessibility to marginalized populations, and broader

2. Public Debt and Wealth Inequality

The dynamics of public debt often intersect with issues of wealth distribution both within nations and globally. The economic structures shaped by debt policies may exacerbate existing inequalities, or offer opportunities for redistribution between classes. The disparity between developed and developing nations in terms of greater access to global markets and favorable borrowing terms raises critical questions about the fairness of global financial structures.

3. Ethical Dimensions of Debt Financing

The ethical considerations pertinent to debt financing are of fairness and the potential for exploitation. The risks of predatory lending practices, which trap individuals, communities and nations in cycles of debt, are significant. Additionally, the encroachment on personal data on the pretext of credit decisions raises concerns about privacy, autonomy, and the potential for discrimination.

4. Public Debt, Sustainable Growth, and Social Equity

Public debt can drive economic growth, as well as turn into a long-term bottleneck for economies. Debt-financed growth should lead to broad benefits, ensuring that development is inclusive in achieving sustainable development, and addressing social inequalities.

CHALLENGES TO TRANSGENDER INCLUSION

Challenges to transgender inclusion stem from societal prejudice, legal inequities, and inadequate representation. Many face barriers in education, employment, and healthcare, compounded by discrimination and lack of policy protections. Cultural stigmas perpetuate marginalization, while institutional frameworks often fail to accommodate diverse gender identities, hindering equal participation and full societal acceptance.

Sub Topics may include:

1. Transgender inclusion in sports

The arena of sports faces challenges like policy inconsistencies, biological debates on fairness, societal biases, and inadequate representation. Striking a balance between inclusivity and competitive equity remains a complex, evolving issue.

2. Challenges to transgender reservation in educational institutions or parliament

It stems from societal stigma, lack of political will, and inadequate representation in policymaking. Ambiguity in defining eligibility criteria, opposition from other marginalized groups, and systemic discrimination further hinder implementation. Addressing these requires robust legal frameworks, awareness campaigns, and inclusive dialogues to ensure equitable opportunities.

3. Healthcare Access

Recently, the U.S. Congress passed a defense bill that includes a provision prohibiting the military health program, TRICARE, from covering certain gender-affirming care for transgender minors. Such decisions have sparked opposition from LGBTQ+ advocacy groups.

4. Incarceration Policies

Transgender incarceration policies face challenges such as inadequate healthcare, placement in facilities misaligned with gender identity, and heightened vulnerability to abuse. In Kentucky, the Attorney General announced that the state is not legally required to use taxpayer funds for gender-affirming surgeries for incarcerated individuals, even if deemed medically necessary. This stance has been criticized by LGBTQ+ advocacy groups for constituting unequal treatment.

SUBMISSION GUIDELINES

We invite entries from students, currently enrolled in an academic program. If you are interested in submitting a piece, kindly fill the form here.

The deadline for sending the entries is 26th January, 2025.

Authors are expected to adhere to the following submission guidelines:

- Articles should contain content that is both original and unpublished. Plagiarised content is highly discouraged.
- Articles should be submitted in Microsoft Word format.
- Sources should be added in the form of hyperlinks in the article.
- The maximum word limit for the entries is 3000 words.
- Co-authorship of upto 2 authors is allowed
- Cross-institution authorship is allowed.

INCENTIVES

- The cash prizes for the winners is as follows
 - a. Rs. 4000 for the Winner
 - b. Rs. 3000 for the Runners up
 - c. Rs. 2000 for the Second Runners up
- Participation certificates will be given to all authors.
- Publication on Kautilya blog for meritorious entries would depend on the discretion of the review team.

In case of any queries, contact us at kautilya.rmlnlu@gmail.com.

Contact no.:

Aditi Joshi- 7892775153

Avesta Vashishtha- 9050936933

Website | Instagram | Podcast | Youtube