

Call for Papers

Environmental Law and Practice Review (ELPR), Volume XI (2026-27)

NALSAR University of Law, Hyderabad, India

The Editorial Board of the Environmental Law and Practice Review (ELPR) invites original submissions for Volume XI (2026-27). ELPR is a double-blind, peer-reviewed journal dedicated to advancing scholarship in Environmental Law and Policy. We welcome contributions from academicians, practitioners, researchers, and students that critically engage with contemporary environmental challenges and legal developments.

About the Journal

ELPR provides a platform for innovative and critical analysis on topics including, but not limited to, natural resources law, climate change policy, environmental governance, technology, and human rights. Our aim is to foster meaningful dialogue and propose solutions to pressing environmental issues.

Types of Contributions

- Articles: Comprehensive studies with a central theme or argument, offering original research, comparative analysis, or theoretical insights. Maximum length: 10,000 words (including footnotes).
- Essays: Concise, focused discussions on specific contemporary problems in environmental law or science, prioritising original arguments and practical solutions. Maximum length: 6,000 words (including footnotes).
- Case Comments / Legislative Critiques & Notes: Analytical pieces critiquing legislation, policies, or judicial decisions, with recommendations for reform. Maximum length: 3,500 words (including footnotes).
- Book Reviews: Critical evaluations of books published within the last three years, relevant to environmental law or science. Maximum length: 3,000 words (including footnotes).

Kindly Note: All submissions must include an abstract of 250-300 words.

Suggested Themes

- Comparative Approaches in International Environmental Law
- International & Regional Environmental Governance
- Climate Justice, Equity, and Global Divide in Environmental Negotiations
- Green Financing, Taxation, and Disclosure Standards
- Environmental Law and Technology
- Environmental Judicial Review and “Environmental Constitutionalism”
- Climate Change Litigation
- Intellectual Property Rights in the Era of Climate Change
- Human Rights and Indigenous Community Rights
- Other contemporary issues related to the above themes

Submission Guidelines

- Formatting: Times New Roman, font size 12 (main text), 10 (footnotes), 1.5 line spacing. Submissions must be in Microsoft Word format.
- Citation: OSCOLA citation style. Speaking footnotes are discouraged.
- Originality: Submissions must be original, unpublished, and not under consideration elsewhere. Plagiarism will result in immediate rejection.
- Authorship: Joint authorship is permitted with no cap on the number of authors.
- Ethics: Authors are responsible for securing permissions for any unpublished works cited and ensuring the manuscript contains no libellous or scandalous material.

Submission Process

- Deadline: 31 March 2026
- How to Submit: Email your manuscript (without author details) and a separate document containing your biographical information (Name, Email, Postal Address, Institutional Affiliation, Course and Academic Year, if applicable) to: \ elpr@nalsar.ac.in \ Subject line: "Submission for ELPR Volume XI"
- Review: The main manuscript must not contain any author information to ensure an anonymous review process.

Contact

For queries, please contact: elpr@nalsar.ac.in